WILSON AND CABINET ACT ON ATTITUDE TOWARD GERMANY

WARSAW CAPTURE AND ENVELOPMENT OF MAIN SLAV FORCE IMPENDS

GREATEST CAMPAIGN SINCE ALEXANDER WORK OF GERMANS

Berlin and Petrograd Both Report Imminence of the Fall of the Polish Capital

SEAPORT OF WINDAU CAPTURED

Germans Cross the Narew River and Intrench Within Forty Miles of Warsaw

LONDON, July 20.—The most stupendous military campaign since the days of Alexander the Great not only threatens the capture of Warsaw but contemplates the envelopment of Russia's chief field armies under the personal command of the Grand Duke Nicholas.

Official dispatches from Berlin and Petrograd today for the first time revealed the extent of the German operations. Military men here did not conceal their amazement at the kaiser's daring in attempting by simultaneous drives to expel the Russians from their naval base at Riga, to capture Warsaw and to force a general Russian retreat eastward toward Brest-Litovsk, 115 miles away a coup thot would release great German armies for operations against the French and English. At least two million Germans are believed to be engaged.

Admission from Petrograd that the Russians have suffered further reverses and triumphant claims of great victories from Berlin, including the capture of Windau, increased the feeling of pessimism here. The censor permitted the Morning Post to print a dispatch from its Budapest correspondent, reporting that the gradual evacuation of Warsaw has been ordered, though military officials here discredited the report.

The cream of the Russian army is now being thrown into the breach between the Bug and the Vistula to stem Mackensen's advance, according to dispatches to the Berlin newspaper. These include the Petrograd and Moscow Imperial guard regiments, seen in action for the first time.

All the Berlin military critics today agreed that the battle on the Bug-Vistula front is of decisive importance. They admitted that the Russians are stubbornly resisting Mackensen's advance but declared the resistance is about to be broken.

War office officials, since the beginning of the present German offensive, have expressed doubt that the Teutons would attempt serious movements against the Polish capital, both from the north and the southwest. They believed the thinning of the German lines north of Warsaw to support Mackensen's campaign around Lublin would enable the Russians to beat back von Hindenburg.

The Russian war office, however, admitted today that von Hindenburg's center continues to advance upon the Narew front. The assumption here is that Russian troops have been withdrawn from this portion of the line to reinforce the armies blocking Mackensens progress from the southwest. All Petrograd dispatches agree that the Russian general staff considers Mackensen's drive the main German offensive.

German's Forts Miles from Warsaw

BERLIN, via Wireless to London, July 20.—Sweeping down on Warsaw der General Gallwitz has forced the Russians to retreat across the Narew river at several points and has taken up positions less than forty miles from the Polish copital.

One wing of General von Buelow's army has captured the Baltic seaport of Windau, commanding a railway leading to Riga. Northwest of Warsaw, the Russians are falling back on the great fortress of Novo Georgiewak, twenty miles from the capital and forming one of the main outer defenses of Warsaw.

An official statement from the war office early today, the first since that issued Sunday afternoon, declared that the great 1,000 mile drive to squeeze the Russians out of Warsaw is moving forward at amazing speed. From the Riga region to Bukowina the Slavs are everywhere in retreat, abandoning guns and ammunition.

Take Thousands Prisoners

In the fighting south of Przasnysz alone, von Hindenburg's forces have captured 101 Russian officers and 28,760 men. Between the Bug and the Vistula Mackensen has made 16,250 prisoners in the past forty-eight

5. Selection from "The Grand Mogul."
6. Selection from "The Bohemian Girl."
7. "The Trombone Sneeze," "The Razzazze Mazzacca."

FRANK'S CONDITION WORSE AS BLOOD POISONING SETS IN

Physicians Declare, However, That Former Atlantan Has Chance for Recovery

MILLEDGEVILLE, Gr., July 20.—Leo M. Frank's case took a slight turn for the worse today, but his doctors acted promptly and later he improved. The physicians said they continued to think the chances favored his recovery.

Infection of his wound was responsible for the sinking spell. Three stitches were taken from it and freer drainage was established. As a result after a 1.4 degree rise in his temperature there was .6 drop.

Warden Smith of the prison farm denied today that Frank had been given a rich man's privileges. He declared he had worn stripes and worked full time.

Mrs. Frank asked that a cot be furnished for her in her husband's room but the warden refused.

ASQUITH WANTS MORE MONEY

LONDON, July 20.—Premier Asquith this afternoon moved a new vote of credit of 150,000,000 pounds sterling (about $750,000,000) for war purposes, out of the funds created by the war loans. This brings the total amount appropriated for the pursuit of the war to more than three billion dollars.

RUSSIAN STEAMER SUNK

LONDON, July 20.—Dispatches to shipping circles this afternoon reported the torpedoing of the 2,188 ton Russian steamer General Radetzky in the North sea on Saturday. Her crew was landed today.

Weather

Temperatures yesterday: High, 74; low, 58; precipitation, .16.

Forecast for La Crosse and vicinity: Fair and continued cool tonight and Wednesday.

For Wisconsin: Fair and continued cool tonight and Wednesday.

For Minnesota: Fair tonight and Wednesday. Not much change in temperature.

For Iowa: Fair tonight and Wednesday. Not much change in temperature.

Weather Conditions

The pressure has increased from the Plains states to the middle Atlantic states and the temperature is generally lower throughout this section.

Local showers have occurred in nearly all sections east of the Rocky mountains during the past 24 hours but the weather is generally fair this morning and with but little cloudiness except in the Atlantic and gulf states.

The pressure is highest over the plains states.

These pressure conditions will cause fair and cool weather in this section for tonight and Wednesday.

MEXICAN ARMIES MASS FOR VITAL CRISIS OF WAR

Decisive Battle Between Carranza and Villa Impends North of City of Mexico

WASHINGTON IS FRANKLY WORRIED

Evacuation of Mexico City by Carranza Upsets Conclusions of the State Department

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Villa and Carranza armies were massing today north of Mexico City for what may be the decisive battle of the present civil war.

Evacuation of the capital by Carranza's army, to meet the Villista attack, was regarded as seriously menacing the inhabitants as Carranza has seized the railroad communications for military purposes.

The main Carranza army under General Gonzales was reported nearing Pachuca to engage Villa's "flying squadron." Gonzales sought to prevent a junction of the Villistas and the Zapatistas, recently driven out of Mexico City.

A Villa Victory

Gen. Villa has taken Queratoro with his flying squadron of cavalry, according to reports to the state department today.

At the same time the department received word of the capture of Naco by 200 Carranzistas under General Gardinas. Villa has no communication south of Zacatecas, according to an El Paso report.

Washington is Blue

Deep pessimism concerning the Mexican outlook prevailed in official circles here today.

The sudden Carranza evacuation of Mexico City and rejuvenation of General Villa's northern campaign were considered most discouraging developments.

News was meager but there seemed no question that Villa had developed fresh strength.

Ship Carranza Gold

News of the arrival of gold and silver bars at Vera Cruz, valued at between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000, for shipment to New York was reported today. The message said the metal was shipped from Pachuca, and while it did not explain the reason for sending it out of the country, it was believed it was for the purpose of getting it coined or of buying munitions and supplies in the interest of Carranza.

Plenty of food supplies have reached Mexico City, the cable stated. Zapatista and Villista currency is being exchanged for fifteen days by Carranzistas with their money.

Food sales have been limited to seven pounds per person. No details from the north of Mexico City were given.

In Immediate Action

At today's cabinet meeting the Mexican situation was considered at some length, but although Secretary Lansing said it was "possible" that some action might be taken soon, there was nothing to indicate consideration of immediate United States recognition of any of the warring factions.

HUNDRED THOUSAND REPORTED LOST IN CHINESE FLOODS

American Authorities in China Recommend That the Navy Aid in Rescue Work

WASHINGTON, July 20.—From 80,000 to 100,000 are believed to have been lost in Chinese floods, according to a telegram received today from the American legation at Pekin. The dispatch states the American consul general at Hong Kong sent this word. American consular authorities in China are recommending that the navy give all the assistance possible. The Wilmington and Callao are rendering aid.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 20.—Slipping up behind Edward Losse, cashier of the local branch of the Cudahy Packing company, a highwayman slugged Losse, grabbing a package containing $1,500 in currency and $3,400 in checks, and disappeared.

RESORT INVOLVED IN TESTIMONY IN WOMAN'S HEARING

Roadhouse Keeper Who Was Refused License Said to Have Sold Drinks and Rented Room

MRS. SCHNEIDER HELD FOR TRIAL

Youth She Is Alleged to Have Led Astray Refuses to Testify Against Her

Sensational evidence accusing James Sokolik, French Island resort keeper, who was refused a liquor license this year as well as one year ago, of selling liquor and renting a room in his place for immoral purposes, was brought out this morning in the preliminary hearing of Mrs. Anna Schneider on a charge of adultery, before Judge John Brindley. Mrs. Schneider was bound over to circuit court and released on bonds of $500.

The story involving Sokolik's place was the "high spot" in a recital by Detective Wm. Fitzsimmons of the story of a two-day roadhouse "party" enjoyed by Mrs. Schneider and Bert Williams, the 17-year-old youth she is alleged to have led astray until he eventually stole $500 from his foster father. The story told by Fitzsimmons purported to be the gist of a statement the police say Mrs. Schneider made voluntarily after her arrest.

In the company of Williams, now sentenced to serve a two and one-half year term at Green Bay reformatory, Mrs. Schneider was arrested July 10 at a Mormon Coulee roadhouse operated by Mrs. Thomas.

Boy Refuses to Testify

Mrs. Schneider was not called to the witness stand. Williams, the 17-year-old boy whom the woman is alleged to have led upon a series of automobile rides about the county, took the stand but was advised by the court that he need not testify to anything that would incriminate himself. The boy only said that he knew the Schneider woman. He refused to testify further. He was nervous on the stand, and spoke in an almost inaudible voice.

Mrs. Schneider sat outside the court inclosure in the space reserved for spectators. Her aged mother sat next to her, and on the other side of the mother sat her husband. The mother and husband were nervous and winced at the more sensational parts of the testimony. Mrs. Schneider appeared unmoved. Across the aisle sat young Williams, in the company of D. C. Dewey, superintendent of the La Crosse Rescue mission.

The story of the two days of continuous joy riding, which finally landed the woman and boy in jail was told by Detective William Fitzsimmons, as he said Mrs. Schneider told it to the chief's office at central station.

Refused to Allow Visitors

Attorney J. E. Higbee, counsel for Mrs. Schneider, objected strenuously to the testimony. Through question which he put to both Fitzsimmons and Detective McGrath, he in effect charged that the police would not allow relatives nor attorneys to see Mrs. Schneider while she was locked up for two days. The detectives denied this.

Register of Deeds A. E. Thompson was subpoenaed as a witness and showed the record of the marriage of Mrs. Schneider, formerly Anna Casper, to Adolph Schneider.

According to Fitzsimmons the Williams boy came to the home of Mrs. Schneider on July 9 at about dinner time. He asked for dinner and stayed for some time. Later in the afternoon the couple chartered an automobile, visiting several roadhouses. They returned to the city in the evening and had supper at a downtown cafe. The automobile was put in service again in the evening and the couple resumed what Fitzsimmons described as a "joy ride."

Visited Many Places

Fitzsimmons testified that the woman told him they visited Chamberlain's place, (the old Jack Bennett resort on North Salem road), the roadhouse formerly operated by Cord Smith, Cushner's French Island resort, and finally Sokolik's place.

At Sokolik's roadhouse, the couple obtained "drinks" and "room No. 6," the detective swore Mrs. Schneider told him.

The joy rides continued uninterrupted until the next night, according to the detective's story, when the Williams boy and Mrs. Schneider were arrested.

CONSUL RECALLED?

WASHINGTON, July 20.—That Arnold Shanklin, American consul general in Mexico City, is on his way to Washington, was confirmed by Secretary Lansing today but the secretary refused to say whether he had been recalled as reported, because of trouble with the Brazilian minister, who has acted as American diplomatic representative in the Mexican capital.

CAPTIVE FOUR YEARS WHEN HUSBAND SEES OLD LOVER'S PICTURE

NEW YORK, July 20.—A story of cruelty that rivals the Fantasies of Poe was revealed by the police today when they broke into an East side tenement-house and rescued Mrs. Teresa Planeta and her two year old baby from a four-year imprisonment. Both are physical wrecks.

Four years ago, she told the police, Joseph, her husband, found a photograph of an old sweetheart of hers in a trunk. Since that time, she said, he has taken her out of the squalid flat but six times and those times at night. When Joseph left in the morning he put sealing wax on all the doors and windows. If the wax was broken when he came home at night it meant terrible beatings and nothing to eat for days. Fear of him kept her from applying for aid, she said. In the four years she and the child have had practically nothing to eat except a plate of stale spaghetti once a day.

The child was born without a doctor, and has never seen the sunlight, except that which filtered through the unwashed tenement windows.

Detectives arrested the husband, a prosperous cigar manufacturer, after a struggle. Charitable societies are caring for the mother and child.

CALLIOPE WILL PLAY FOR POOR MOTHERS AND KIDDIES AUG. 27

To hundreds of poor mothers and their kiddies who have heard the calliope playing at the levee to draw happy, laughing crowds—which they could not join—upon the big boats for river excursions, the sound of the raucous steam piano will be sweet music the morning of August 27. On that day the steam piano will be playing for them. They will be the passengers the steamer G. W. Hill will carry out of the harbor on the first excursion of its kind ever conducted from La Crosse.

The excursion will be given under the auspices of the Associated Charities. Miss Nadia Thomas, secretary, will distribute the tickets. The use of the boat was donated to the Associated Charities by Captain Wisherd, head of the Wisherd line and commander of the Hlil.

The Associated Charities is also planning another excursion on July 27 for the financial benefit of its work. This excursion will also be on the Hill to Winona and back. The start will be made at 11 o'clock in the morning and the boat will dock on the return at 7 in the evening.

REPORT SAYS THAT GERMAN SUBMARINES OPERATE OFF MAINE

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Five government departments—state, treasury, navy, justice, and commerce—had under consideration today reports that submarines, presumably German, were operating off the Maine coast.

The story was looked upon rather doubtfully. Nevertheless it was being looked into.

Apparently it reached the state department first in the form of a suspicion expressed by summer residents of Upper Penobscot Bay that Germany had a submarine base in that vicinity.

HORSE IS DROWNED IN BLACK RIVER ON ISLAND ROAD

Livery Rig Found in Water and Woman Who Hired It Says She Gave It to a Man

DOSEN'T KNOW WHO HE WAS

Mrs. Gregg Tells Police She Does Not Know Man nor Where the Transfer Took Place

A lively horse owned by George R. Hodge was drowned in Black river last night when horse and buggy went over a six-foot embankment on the French Island road into about three feet of water. The accident is believed to have happened about midnight as Mrs. James L. Gregg, 133 South Fourth street, who had rented the rig early in the evening, told Mr. Hodge that she had sent the rig home with another party at eleven o'clock last night.

The livery stable owner enlisted the police in his aid this morning, when he was unable to find out to whom Mrs. Gregg had turned over the rig. Mrs. Gregg told the police she knew neither the man to whom she had confided the buggy nor where the transfer took place.

Horse's Head Held Down

The buggy this morning was lying on its right side in the water. The head of the horse had been pinned under the dash and held there by the weight of the buggy and the harness which had become entangled in the animal's struggle for life. The left front leg of the horse protruded through the top of the buggy. The traces had been losed, indicating that the driver of the rig had made an effort to release the imprisoned animal.

The position of the demolished rig was taken to indicate that the horse, probably becoming frightened from the headlights of an approaching automobile, had backed off the road. Another theory advanced was that of a runaway.

"Didn't Get Your Rig"

A report by telephone that a horse had been drowned on French Island, with the non-appearance of his rig this morning, caused Mr. Hodge to call Mrs. Gregg by telephone.

"Where's my rig?" Mr. Hodge says he asked.

"I sent it down last night with a

BATTERED DRIVER DENIES HIS GUILT

Childress to Be Tried Aug. 2 on Charge of Operating Automobile While Drunk

SAYS THE POLICE BEAT HIM

Asserts He Fought Only in Defense and That He Was Beaten in Cell

George Childress, 514 South Seventh street, badly battered after his battle with three policemen and a fireman Sunday night, pleaded not guilty to a charge of operating an automobile while in an intoxicated condition, when hailed before Judge John Brindley yesterday afternoon. The case was continued until August 2.

Childress lost control of his automobile as it neared the corner of Third and Jay streets at about 9:30 o'clock Sunday night, according to Mrs. John Seitz, who says the machine was traveling at a rapid rate. Mrs. Seitz says the auto suddenly lurched and crashed across the sidewalk, striking Mrs. John Weisman, and barely passing Mrs. Seitz, a daughter of Mrs. Weisman, who with three small children and her mother were talking to a friend on the corner.

Mrs. Weisman to Recover

Mrs. Weisman, who is now confined at the St. Francis hospitalfi rested easily last night, and is considered by her physicians to be out of danger.

The condition of little Helen and Margaret Falk, seriously injured at about the same time Sunday night by an automobile said to be owned and driven by E. H. Kinney, North Salem road farmer, remains unchanged.

Childress declines to be the hero of a single-handed assault upon the police. He declares that Officer Wermuth struck him without warrant while enroute to the police station. He admitted fighting back but says it was in self-defense. He says than upon reaching central station he was beaten by three officers, dragged into a cell with a negro and there again beaten.

Childress says that through his attorney, A. C. Wolfe, he will begin an action for damages against Wermuth, Blaine Thompson and another officer who he says maltreated him.

The police agree that no more force was used on Childress than was necessary to quell his resistance.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—President Wilson today approved an interior department order establishing "a system of compensation for accidents which may occur on the work of constructing railways in Alaska."

GREATEST COUNCIL SINCE RELELLION CONSIDERS POLICY

Note Drafted by Lansing Is Gone Over Time and Again in Two Hour Meeting Today

GRAVITY OF MEETING EVIDENT

Reported Attempt at Torpedoing of Orduna Said to Be Injected Into the Situation

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, July 20.—In a cabinet council regarded as one of the most momentous since the civil war, President Wilson and his advisers today practically determined America's future attitude toward Germany.

For nearly two hours the president and the members of his ministry went over and over the note drafted by Secretary Lansing in answer to the Berlin foreign office's last rejection of America's demand for humanitarian modification of Germany's submarine warfare.

Commerce Secretary Redfield was the only absentee.

The conference's gravity was evident. The serious expression worn by the president and his advisers left no doubt on this point.

Before the meeting the chief executive and Secretary Lansing had an hour's private talk at the White house, looking over the rough draft of the note preliminary to its submission to the cabinet.

"Orduna" Case Figures

The reported submarine attack on the Cunarder Orduna, with American passengers on board, also was injected into the situation. Secretary Lansing announced a federal investigation of the incident had been ordered through treasury officials.

There was much reticence concerning the conference, but it was understood that the president's and Secretary Lansing's views, as embodied in the proposed note, were indorsed unanimously.

The expectation was that Lansing would draft the formal, final note in accordance with suggestions made today and submit it for a concluding cabinet examination next week and that it will be dispatched early next week.

To what extent the Orduna affair would figure in the note, it was understood, would depend on the result of the pending investigation. The government has no information, Secretary Lansing, confirmatory of the report that the ship was fired upon without warning. If it is proved that the vessel disregarded an order to heave-to for a search, he intimated there would be no ground for an American complaint.

In any event, he added, the matter probably would not delay the note.

The communication was said to be much shorter than those which have preceded it.

There were unconfirmed reports that the United States will respond to Germany's hint for American mediation, in the interests of a modification both in German submarine methods and in the British order in council. It was suggested that the Berlin foreign office might properly be asked to make a definite proposition for transmission, through Washington to London.

Deprecates Speculator

Word came directly from President Wilson deprecating speculation concerning the note's contents. There was a good deal of it, nevertheless. It was accepted that the communication would declare clearly and unequivocally that America means to maintain its rights. It was also said it will express "surprise and regret" that Germany cannot accept in its undersea operations, America's broad humanitarian view concerning the warning and search of vessels before torpedo attacks.

The cabinet meeting at which the German situation was considered, adjourned today at 1:10, having been in session two hours and ten minutes.

Cabinet meetings members after the conference refuse point-blank to discuss the matters before the meeting. Beyond confirming the fact that a note is actually in preparation, Secretary Lansing likewise refused comment.

It was stated that Mexican affairs were also considered.

ROBINSON CRITICISED

NEW YORK, July 20.—A storm of criticism and indignation today swept down on David Robinson, foreman of the jury which found Harry K. Thaw sane, for his statements in an interview that the jury had considered the unwritten law in its verdict, contrary to the court's charge.

Several of the jurymen indignantly denied the truth of Robinson's statements and termed him a "publicity seeker."

CROPS DAMAGED BY BIG RAINS

Lansing Farmers Say Many Localities Witnessed Total Loss to Small Grain and Corn by Downfalls

LANSING, Iowa, July 20.—(Special.)—Severe rain of early Sunday morning laid thousands of acres of ripened oats to the ground. Practically every farmer in this section was prepared to start cutting the crop this week, and keen disappointment is felt at the unexpected calamity. Corn, due to the excessive cold in the early season promised about half a crop, but the small grain gave evidence of a large enough yield to nicely over balance the loss in that direction, until the rain wrecked it. Such quantities of water fell that the village creek bottoms were flooded, and the flats about Lansing completely inundated. The condition of the ball grounds prevented a game scheduled Sunday between the Clothiers of La Crosse and the local team.

Wrestle for Scouts

The Boy Scouts are to be given a benefit Friday evening, Robert Fredrichs, and the Greek, Kaveris, booking that date for a wrestling match; proceeds to be donated to the scouts. The exhibition is to be held on the ball diamond, and already keen interest is manifested in the engagement.

Aschom at Meet

George Aschom is attending a ten days' session for the instruction of the young people of the Presbyterian church, at Storm Lake, Ia. The conference embraces a practical course of subjects relative to susccessful church work. Among well known instructors at the meetings is noticed the name of William Shaw, and several equally as prominent.

Local and Personal

La Crosse turned out in numbers to attend the "W. W." excursion to Lansing Sunday. Fully thirteen hundred persons enjoyed a two hours sojourn and during the time spent here, ice cream parlors and confectioners did a thriving business. The best of feeling prevailed and all visitors were given the freedom of the city.

Miss Lydia Strube was compelled to undergo a third operation late Saturday, as a result of appendicitis from which she suffered a fortnight since. Her condition, though serious, is considered hopeful.

Miss Vera Ahlstrom, local photographer, is ill at the home of her parents on Diagional street. Three physicians were called in consultation on the case Saturday, but the nature of the patient's ailment has not been arrived at, at last reports.

Dr. Otto Schott and wife of Chicago, are in the city for their annual summer vacation with the doctor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Schott.

Mrs. Charles Ahlstrom of West Main, was successfully operated on at the city hospital Saturday afternoon for acute appendicitis. Dr. Pond of Dubuque, did the surgical work.

Miss Jeannette Brophy of Chicago is a welcome home visitor with her parents, and many Lansing friends.

The "Lure of The Hills" caught Rob Fredrichs, the wrestler, shortly after his arrival in town, and with tent and full camping outfit he has taken to the heights for the remainder of his stay in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. Chrischelles of Algona, Ia., are sojourning with the Mrs. Augusta and H. C. Nielander families.

Phil Roggensack of North La Crosse, was a welcome Sunday visitor with his mother, Mrs. Amelia Roggensack. He came down with the excursionists from the Gateway City, and remained until the Morning Star went northward in the late evening.

Mrs. Julia McCormick of New Albin, was a city caller Sunday for a few hours. During her visit she was the guest of the Mrs. Mary Murphy family.

Louis Thompson of New Albin was a Sunday visitor in Lansing with his many young friends.

A. Matter, August Anderson, John Kelleher and H. Tony, all of Waukon, were over Sunday guests of Lansing acquaintances.

Mr. Loftus and family of De Soto, were Sunday callers in town with Mr. Loftus' sister, Sister Severene, of the Franciscian order, at the Parochial school.

Leo Ryan of Harpers Ferry, Sundayed with Attorney Joseph Dempsey.

George Copeland of La Crosse, was a week-end guest of his family in Lansing.

Mrs. Henry Kennedy and sons from North Dakota, are visiting Lansing and Wexford relatives.

He Was Travel-Wise

A lively looking porter stood on the rear platform of a sleeping car in the Pennsylvania station in Philadelphia when a fussy and choleric old man clambered up the steps. The latter stood at the door, puffed a moment and then turned to the young man in uniform.

"Porter," he said. "I'm going to San Francisco. I want to be well taken care of. I pay for it. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir, but—"

"Never mind any 'buts.' You listen to what I say. Keep the train boys away from me. Dust me off whenever I want you to. Give me an extra blanket, and if there is any one in the berth over me, slide him into another. I want you to—"

"But, say, boss, I—"

"Young man, when I'm giving instructions, I prefer to do the talking myself. You do as I say. Here is a $2 bill. I want to get the good of it. Not a word, sir."

"All right, boss!" he shouted. "You can do the talking if you want to. I'm powerfully sorry you wouldn't let me tell you, but I ain't going out on that train."

"Oh, heigh-ho" says the jolly old sun.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— Why the Sun Goes to Bed at Night.

"THE sun goes to bed at night just like a tired kiddy," said daddy. "At least let us pretend that he does. Of course he really doesn't at all. He smiles upon the Chinese children during the night in our own land. But just for the story we'll pretend that the jolly old sun goes to bed at night like a weary kiddy who has played too hard.

"So we'll imagine that the old sun gets up in the morning. Does he need an alarm clock, you ask? Oh, my, no, Jack! You see, he's been used to getting up at that particular hour for so many years and years that it's grown to be on his mind.

"'Oh, heigh-ho!' says the jolly old sun, with a prodigious yawn. 'I must be getting up this summer day, for there is so much to be done. There are all those little kiddies to be warmed, and they love my light so well to play in. Oh, heigh-ho! I mustn't sleep any longer. I must be getting up and about my work. Oh, heigh-ho, heigh-ho!'

"So the jolly old sun rises and washes his face with a few raindrops out of some convenient cloud and eats his breakfast of sweet morning breeze sprinkled with dew, and then he turns his red eye down at the waking world as he starts his journey toward the west. For he has some busy hours ahead of him.

"Now, the jolly old sun sees many strange and stirring sights during his trip away up in the blue sky, but I think he loves the kiddies best of all. And when he looks down and sees the kiddies trooping out of their homes during the glad vacation time he is so happy that he smiles a very jolly and crimson smile. His smile is so bright that you can't look at him right in the face. He is a very happy old sun because he is doing good.

"So he smiles upon the children at their play and makes them warm, and sometimes he smiles all the more when he makes them almost too warm, so that they have to wipe their little streaming faces with their handkerchiefs.

"And he notices the green growing things and the flowers and the leaves of the trees, and he says to himself, 'They need me, and so I will help them to grow.'

"So he does all the good he can and makes the world happier during the day. Sometimes a shower comes, but he keeps right on shining till he drives the clouds away.

"Then comes the night. 'Oh, hum!' says the sun. 'I'm tired. I think I've earned a night's rest.'

"So in the west there's a rosy bank of clouds waiting for him, and, tired with the long day, he lies down and sleeps, just like a tired kiddy."

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

PENELOPE

BY MARTHA M'CULLOCH-WILLIAMS.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure

From her youth upward, Penelope had found her legs her bane. They were, you see, of classic proportion—the long Greek lines sculptors adore. But Grandma Betton had fretted over them dreadfully—they made it so hard to adapt handed-down garments. Betty, Penelope's next elder sister, outgrew her things before they were half worn. Yet the waists of them bagged on Penelope, the skirts hardly hiding her slim knees. Sitting, she seemed short, even at twelve. Standing, she was like a sapling—so declared her family. Other folk likened her to a flower, or a stalk of wheat—she was so slim and, withal, so lithely graceful.

The pity of it, they did not tell her of her good points. A woman grown, Penelope humbly, honestly thought herself a fright, and, consequently, was self-consciously awkward. This reacted upon a spirit naturally free and fine, making her sharp in speech aggressive in spite of shyness, a thorn in the side of an easy-going family firmly convinced she would never marry—a conviction that in her case, as with so many others, might have wrought its own fulfillment if Fate had not stepped in and ruled otherwise.

Penelope, however, accepted the spinster doom as fixed. Therefore she drew her fine hair away from her classic brow, wore the garments nobody else cared to appear in after they had been bought, and thereby made herself as nearly a fright as a healthy complexion and very good eyes permitted.

The joy of life for her centered in the theater, notwithstanding she had never felt the least inclination to make herself a part of it. Weekly she skimped on car fare, fallals and whatnot, not to mention cultivating a violent hatred for ice cream sodas and sundaes of every persuasion, in order to go alone to a good matinee—neither the movies nor the cheap stock houses allured her in the least.

Each week she bought next week's ticket—this to make sure of an end seat. Only in an end seat, in most of the house, could she sit in any degree of comfort. Those bothersome legs again! With the freedom of the aisle at her command, she could just about manage to avoid cramping in the course of an afternoon.

Having her seat secured in advance, she went barely in time to see the curtain rise, for then the row was likely to be filled and nobody would struggle across those preposterous knees until after the first act.

Judge, then, her mental state when, all intent upon seeing the star play of the winter, she found her chosen and paid-for seat occupied by an elderly man and the row filled with what was evidently a family party—a sweet-faced, white-haired woman, two pretty girls, a young matron, vivacious and no-end stylish, and a very good-looking young man, evidently her husband. Those two were unmistakably urban. Penelope instantly decided; the others had provincial written all over them, but written inoffensively; probably father, mother and the girls come a-visiting and brought to see this particular play, because everybody else was seeing it. Penelope herself had to wait a fortnight in order to secure the seat she wanted on the aisle.

She waited with a sort of grim satisfaction the ousting of the intruder.

The usher spoke sharply to the old man. Instantly the younger one leaned across, showing a handful of checks. The usher studied them intently, the house the while ringing with applause as the rising curtain disclosed a couple of stage favorites.

Penelope grew impatient. "I should like my seat, if you please," she said with cold civility. The young man rose, stepped out in front of her, looked at the check the usher held, then said politely: "There's evidently a mix-up. Will you please take my seat; my father—" A glance at the old man's knees supplemented his appeal.

"I can't," Penelope returned, not too amiably. People all about frowned; one bold soul hissed faintly. The old gentleman rose quickly, touched his son's arm and said: "We'll go back together, son. Maybe there is still standing room. Never mind now—it won't tire me—and I am bound not to miss the play."

"You live out of town?" Penelope said, her better nature returning promptly.

"A thousand miles," he laughed. "So—of course—I want to see all the wonders."

"You shall see this—at your ease," Penelope assured him smilingly. "I can come to see it any afternoon—"

"And this is his only chance," the young man interrupted gratefully. "My people are leaving town tonight—else we should have waited for the evening performance. Still—I don't like taking your seat. Come with me to the box office, please. It needs—a good talking to."

"Which I am quite equal to undertake by myself. Sit down and see the play," Penelope decided, amazed at her own self-possession. She was even more astonished when, in the lobby—to which he had followed her—the young man touched her arm, saying deferentially: "You must let me have your name—here is my card. I simply can't thank you enough—dad's heart was so set on this."

Penelope took the card without looking at it, handing over her own, face down, in return. Then, with a quick "go right back to dad!" she darted outside resolved to have it out with the box office at a more convenient season. She had had excitement enough for one day.

She loitered through the shops, treated herself to tea at her favorite place and got home as usual, to outward eyes. And somehow—she felt an unusual exhilaration. She has been kind when she might have been nasty—and the reflex was far from unpleasant.

She looked at the card, of course, reading there "F. S. Adriance," with a club address below, which made her wonder a bit, until she decided he might be living with his wife at some hotel. On the whole, the mischance had turned out to a welcome novelty in her rather humdrum life.

Next afternoon she had a surprise—the maid brought in cards for her Mr. and Mrs. Adriance had called to see her. Perhaps fate had previsions—anyhow something had inspired Pen to curl her hair and get into a pale violet afternoon frock that became her wonderfully well. Thus it happened she was all unlike the forbidding tailor-made self the visitors expected to find.

The change put them all at their ease. The Adriances, it turned out, had several friends who were well known to the Chesters. That had emboldened them to come over and ask Pen to make one of a theater party the following week, with a little supper afterward. They would see to her safe conduct with the mutual friends in the party to serve as social insurance. Pen listened to the invitation as though in a dream—she could hardly believe herself awake. But she managed to make a very neat acceptance, and announced the fact to her family at dinner with a successful casual air.

This was but the first of a series of happy outings—to dinners, to theaters, to concerts and many delightful entertainments. After six weeks of it Pen took herself sternly to task—she was growing too fond of all this. She did not admit it even to herself, but she knew she was growing fond of Frank Adriance. He was not married, it turned out—the gay young matron who sat by his side at the theater was his sister-in-law. Her husband was abroad on business and they were living at a hotel for the winter.

All this the vivacious sister-in-law told Pen in the first ten minutes of their acquaintance, adding, with a sly glance toward her good-looking brother-in-law: "The Adriances do make such fine husbands. I hate to see one of them going to waste."

Then she had run on quite unreservedly about how difficult Frank was—polite to everything in petticoats, but "so unsusceptible"! Declared he wanted a wife not of the cut-and-dried sort—a woman with character and a will of her own. She must be beautiful, too—at that Pen managed to change the subject.

One day when she was at her worse—sallow and holloweyed from her effort to crush her growing fondness for Frank—the affair came to a crisis. As it happened, she had dressed herself in a forbidding, slouchy green something, at which even economy in the person of Grandma Betton had cried out aghast. Yet when Frank Adriance, unannounced, came upon her in the library, on her knees, sorting old prints and papers, he did not pause to see what a fright she had made of herself. He lifted her to her feet looking earnestly in her face, and began, with a husky tremor. "Pen—darling—I can't live without you—so—I—I came at this unearthly hour to tell you—"

"Me?" Pen cried incredulously, dragging him toward a big bookcase, the doors of which furnished a distorted mirror. "Look! Such a fright! You—you must be making sport of me!"

"A fright! You're a goddess—just now, I admit, slightly disguised!" Adriance returned, flinging his arms about her: "Say yes, dearest! I shan't let you go until you do."

"You are sure?" Pen insisted tremulously. "What can you see in me to love?"

"Yourself! I love you the minute I looked at you—tall and slender and different—the woman of all the world for me!"

SPARTA RESIDENCE BURNS FOLLOWING PITCH EXPLOSION

Home of Ambrose Aylesworth Destroyed with a Loss of $3,000 Yesterday Morning

SPARTA, Wis., July 20.—(Special.)—The explosion of a pan of tar, which was being heated on the kitchen stove caused the destruction by fire yesterday morning of the residence of Ambrose Aylesworth, with a loss of approximately $2,900, only part of which was covered by insurance.

Mr. Aylesworth had expected to use the tar in repairing the roof of his home. In an instant the contents of the pan had flown in every direction and had caught on fire. In a few seconds the room was in a blaze, and shortly, other parts of the house were set on fire.

When the fire department arrived, the entire rear part of the house was a mass of flames. The family had no time to remove even the choicest of the furnishings of the home, and the efforts of the fire department were useless, as far as being able to save the furnishings of the house from harm. It is the opinion of Mr. Aylesworth that his home cannot be repaired.

A pet parrot perished in the flames.

AND WHO SHALL SAY

The Orduna incident emphasizes the fact that observation of the sea rule of search and safety by submarines imposes much upon the honor of the submarine crew.

The rule provides that the warship must first signal the merchantman to stop. In case compliance is not immediate, he may then fire a solid shot across her bows. If the merchantman still ignores the warning, the war vessel may fire upon her.

From the Orduna's captain and others on the boat comes the story that a submarine fired a torpedo on this passenger vessel carrying among others twenty-one Americans, that this was followed by the shelling of the Orduna, that no signal at all was given.

May we not expect from the submarine officer a contradictory statement? Supposing his report says that a signal to stop was unheeded, that as a second signal a solid shot was fired and that thereafter the boat was shelled?

The very best the Orduna people could do would be to say that they did not see the signal.

The firing of the torpedo will be the most difficult thing for the German officer to explain, but at least he can say that he fired it after first signalling the Orduna to stop, and he may deny that he fired a torpedo at all.

Thus there will always be a chance for an argument. A merchantman's captain may see the signal to stop and prefer to cut and run, in which case he might deny having seen the warning. A submarine captain may say he gave a warning signal in a case in which he gave none.

The Orduna case is important for two reasons: the attack displays wantonness in that the Orduna was an out-going boat and could not be carrying contraband to Germany's foes; it suggests the possibility that Germany is prepared, in the face of America's protest, to prosecute the submarine warfare in its most reprehensible phases. It will be given consideration by the president in his interpretation of the German attitude upon which will be based America's next note to Germany.

SOULS OF COMPASSION

Not long ago the TRIBUNE expressed the opinion that there are in La Crosse a large number of citizens who would be glad to furnish automobiles to carry on the service of the baby colony at Myrick park. Responses to general appeals were slow, no doubt because these did not carry the weight of a personal message. But quick and generous was the response to the direct appeal.

It was just past noon yesterday that Mrs. A. W. Langenbach consented to act as spokesman for a number of citizens who had interested themselves in soliciting the automobile service. Before three o'clock she had handed in names of people who had consented with all the spirit of volunteers, as follows:

Mrs. Joseph B. Funke, one week; Miss Mary O'Connell, one week; Miss Bertha Hickisch, one week; Miss Jennie Heileman, two weeks; Mr. George W. Burton, Mrs. L. C. Colman, Mrs. Frank Funke and Mrs. George Zeisler one week each.

Mrs. Langenbach also offered her own car for a week, and had in mind others who are equally certain to be ready helpers. Already Joseph M. Hixon's car is in the service, and Dr. Gunderson, Carl Schaefer, Wm. Dwyer and others have been generous in their assistance.

It makes a pretty story—the way people are helping this useful social enterprise. It makes one feel more than ever that La Crosse is a good place in which to live. If anyone suggested that while the wash lady is attending to the laundry her baby should be given a constitutional in the family automobile one might lose one's breath, but it appears we are getting almost that democratic in an organized way. Humanity is a greater force than militaryism, and as long as we are capable of service like this the ship of state will safely sail the sea of civilization.

ITS CHICKENS COME HOME

With the story of a state mad for vengeance still in our ears we find it difficult to stifle a suspicion that the murderous assailant of Leo M. Frank was not the irresponsible homicide he appears to be. To put a bug in his ear, or at least to wink at his opportunity, would be so easy and so satisfying. No doubt there are thousands of people in Georgia who would love to contribute to the demise of Frank, and that one of them happened to hold a place of more or less authority in the state penitentiary is not beyond the bounds of possibility.

But we dismiss the thought and leave the state of Georgia to settle with Mr. Green and to reckon with the problem of inefficiency that made the crime possible. It will have to deal for many years with the greater problem of mob rule that is the underlying cause of the crime.

With all those bombs hidden in cargoes travel to Europe on liners is almost as dangerous as canoeing.

A new baby begins to cry as soon as it discovers what a sorry mistake it made in getting born.

Man's Passion for War

While in the sea, the murd'rous shark
Darts wildly for his prey.
And cuttle-fish, with fluid dark,
Befoul and blot the spray;
Long eels, all eager for our flesh,
Disport themselves in slime;
And sharp-clawed crabs, in rocky mesh,
With malice bide their time.

But raging pest of land or sea,
Or hawk that scours the air,
Are naught, in monstrous savagery,
To man with passions bare.
Old Adam classed them by all name,
From store or lingual pelf;
He sensed their nature wild or tame

LOVE INSURANCE

A COMEDY ROMANCE

Her pleading eyes gazed into his. It was a touching scene. To be besought thus tenderly by a famous beauty in the secluded parlor of a southern hotel The touch of her hands on his shoulders thrilled him. The color of Jockey Club—

It was at this instant that Mr. Minot, looking past the Gaiety lady's beautiful golden coiffure, beheld Miss Cynthia Meyrick standing in the doorway of that parlor, a smile on her face. She disappeared on the instant, but Gabrielle Rose's "big scene" was ruined beyond repair.

"My dear lady"—gently Minot slipped from beneath her lovely hands—"I assure you I do like you—more than a little. But unfortunately my loyalty to Harrowby—no, I won't say that—circumstances are such that I can not be your friend in this instance. Though, if I could serve you in any other way—"

Gabrielle Rose snapped her fingers.

"Very well." Her voice had a metallic ring now. "We shall see what we shall see."

"Undoubtedly. I bid you good day."

As Minot, somewhat dazed, walked along the veranda of the De la Pax he met Miss Meyrick. There was a mischievous gleam in her eye.

"Really, it was so tactless of me, Mr. Minot," she said. "A thousand apologies."

He pretended not to understand.

"My untimely descent on the parlor." She beamed on him. "I presume it happened because romance draws me—like a magnet. Even other people's."

Minot smiled vainly, and for once sought to end their talk.

"Oh, do sit down just a moment," she pleaded. "I want to thank you for the great service you did Harrowby and me—last night."

"What—what service?" asked Minot, sinking into a chair.

She leaned close, and spoke in a whisper.

"Your part in the kidnaping. Harrowby has told me. It was sweet of you—so unselfish."

"Damn!" thought Minot. And then he thought two more.

"To put yourself out that our wedding may be a success!" Was this sarcasm, Minot wondered. "I'm so glad to know about it, Mr. Minot. It shows me at last—just what you think is"—she looked away—"best for me."

"Best for you? What do you mean?"

"Can't you understand? From some things you've said I have thought—perhaps—you didn't just approve of my—marriage. And now I see I misconstrued you—utterly. You want me to marry Harrowby. You're working for it. I shouldn't be surprised if you were on that train last Monday just to make sure that—I'd—get here—safely."

Really, it was inhuman. Did she realize how inhuman it was? One glance at Minot might have told her. But she was still looking away.

"So I want to thank you, Mr. Minot," she went on. "I shall always remember your—kindness. I couldn't understand at first, but now—I wonder? You know, it's an old theory that as soon as one has one's own affair of the heart arranged, one begins to plan for others?"

Minot made a little whistling sound through his clenched teeth. The girl stood up.

"Your thoughtfulness has made me very happy," she laughed. "It shows that perhaps you care for me—just a little—too."

She was gone! Minot sat swearing softly to himself, banging the arm of his chair with his fist. He raged at Thacker, Jephson, the solar system. Gradually his anger cooled. Underneath the raillery in Cynthia Meyrick's tone he had thought he detected something of a serious note—as though she were a little wistful—a little hurt.

Did she care? Bitter-sweet thought! In the midst of all this farce and melodrama, had she come to care?—just a little?—

Just a little! Bah!

Minot rose and went out on the avenue.

Prince Nevin Bey Imno was accustomed to give lectures twice daily on the textures of his precious rugs, at his shop in the Alameda courtyard. His afternoon lecture was just finished as Mr. Minot stepped into the shop. A dozen awed housewives from the Middle West were hurrying away to write home on the hotel stationery that they had met a prince. When the last one had gone out Minot stepped forward.

"Prince—I've dropped in to warn you. A very angry woman will be here shortly to see you."

The handsome young Persian shrugged his shoulders, and took off the jacket of the native uniform with which he embellished his talks.

"Why is she angry? All my rugs—they are what I say they are. In this town are many liars selling oriental rugs. Oriental! Ugh! In New Jersey they were made. But not my rugs. See! Only in my native country, where I was a prince of the—"

"Yes, yes. But this lady is not coming about rugs. I refer to your ex-wife."

"Ah. You are mistaken. I have never married."

"Oh, yes, you have. I know all about it. There's no need to lie. The whole story is out, and the lady's game in San Marco is queered. She thinks you told. That's why she'll be here for a chat."

"But I did not tell. Only this morning did I see her first. I could not tell—so soon. Who could I tell—so soon?"

"I knew you didn't tell. But can you prove it to an agitated lady? No. You'd better close up for the evening."

"Ah, yes—you are right. I am innocent—but what does Gabrielle care for innocence? We are no longer married—still I should not want to meet her now. I will close. But first—my friend—my benefactor—could I interest you in this rug? See! Only in my native country, where—"

"Prince," said Minot, "I couldn't use a rug if you gave me one."

"That is exactly what I would do. You are my friend. You serve me. I give you this. Fifty dollars. That is giving it to you. Note the weave. Only in my—"

"Good night," interrupted Minot. "And take my advice. Hurry!"

Gloomy, discouraged, he turned back toward his own hotel. It was true, Gabrielle Rose's husband at the time of the letters was in San Marco. The emissary of Jephson was serving a cause that could not lose. That afternoon he had hoped. Was there anything dishonorable in that? Jephson and Thacker could command his service, they could not command his heart. He had hoped—and now—

At a corner a negro gave him a handbill. He read:

WHO HAS KIDNAPED
THE REAL
LORD HARROWBY?
AT THE OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT
Mr. Henry Trimmer Will Appear in Place of His Unfortunate Friend,
Lord Harroby, and Will Make a Few
WARM AND SIZZLING REMARKS.
NO ADVANCE IN PRICES.

Mr. Minot tossed the bill into the street. Into his eyes came the ghost-like semblance of a smile. After all, the famous Harrowby wedding had not yet taken place.

"DISAPPOINTED" SAYS DESMOND OF GIVING UP HIKE

Made Average of Better Than 20 Miles a Day Covering 266 Miles in Eleven Days

ROUGHEST PART OF IT OVER

Eighty Year Old Veteran Whose Wife Stopped Trip Says it Would Have Been Easy

"I am sadly disappointed that I had to abandon my trip," said John Desmond, 80-year-old civil war veteran, whose wife prevailed upon him to abandon his contemplated hike to Washington when he had reached Milwaukee, when interviewed this morning upon his return from Milwaukee. In answer to a question as to his health the veteran hiker replied, "I never felt better in all my life; the rest of the trip would have been nothing to complete, because I had finished the roughest part of the trip in the hike from here to Milwaukee. All you can say for me is that I am sadly disappointed." He looked the part.

Despite the rough traveling, Mr. Desmond averaged slightly better than twenty miles a day. He negotiated the distance of 226 miles to the Cream city in practically eleven days, arriving at Milwaukee on the morning of the thirteenth day after starting. He was held up by inclement weather at Kilbourn on July 6, and at Doylestown two days later, making eleven days of actual walking.

The aged hiker was loud in his praises of the members of the G. A. R. of Milwaukee, who entertained him "royally," as he put it to a reporter this morning.

He returned to La Crosse at 6:05 last night.

USE OF BOMBS MAKES SOLDIER VALUABLE

Hand Grenades Used to a Large Extent by Soldiers of the Little Kingdom

BY HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NISCH, Serbia, May 3.—By Mail to New York.—The throwing of hand bombs has been developed into one of the most formidable weapons of the Serbian army.

It is his ability along this line that makes the Serbian soldier one of the best in the world. Another thing which contributes to the same reputation, at least, according to Dr. S. H. Hodge, one of the American Red Cross surgeons in Serbia, is the Serbian's ability to get along without a commissary department.

"A peasant in one of the southern Serbian provinces for example," says Dr. Hodge, "will be called to the colors. The recruiting officer gives him a bunch of onions, ties a dozen bombs onto him and turns him loose. No further attention is paid to him and no further provision is made for him, but in the due course of time he turns up at Belgrade, possibly with his onions gone, but with his bombs still intact, joins his regiment, and the next day will be creating havoc in the Austrian ranks by his bomb slinging."

The hand bombs now in general use in the Serbian army are about the size of a large orange. They are exploded by means of a fuse and an ordinary cigaret lighter is the only other equipment furnished to the soldier. Every tenth soldier in the Serbian army, no matter in what branch of the service, is now equipped solely as a bomb thrower.

Austrian prisoners here were frank in admitting the terrible havoc wrought by these. They are especially effective in breaking down the barbed wire entanglements before trenches that are being carried by assault and when finally they are hurled by the screeching, screaming Serbians into the midst of the trench defenders themselves, panic almost inevitably follows.

One Austrian officer, a prisoner at Nisch, expressed to me as no one else possably could the point of view of the Austrians as regards these bombs themselves. The officer was one of the goodly number at Nisch whose position as prisoners is probably without an equal in the present war.

Austria has always at all times looked down with the utmost contempt on little Serbia and this has especially been the case in military circles. In the hopes of overcoming this attitude Serbia has chosen to treat the Austrian officers taken prisoners in the most magnificent style she can afford.

The most modern and commodious set of barracks at Nisch has been set aside for them, they have been furnished with polo ponies and they lead very much the life of an officers' club. Little if any guard is placed over them and Serbia has merely asked their word of honor as officers that won't run away.

In spite of all this, the great bulk of the officers make no attempt whatever to conceal their supercilious contempt for their captors. They have even regarded their word of honor given to the Serbians as of such little binding importance that not a few of them have escaped.

WOMAN A HOLDUP

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 20.—Detectives were trying today to learn the past of Cleveland's woman holdup artist.

She was arrested last night after Patrolman Crawford chased her several blocks, after she held up Harry Miller. The woman, with a few well directed kicks, knocked Miller down before she fled. Severe grilling failed to force the woman to reveal her name or her past.

THAW SPENDS DAY WITH HIS MOTHER

Slayer of Stanford White Spends Time with His Mother and Close Friends

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 20.—Harry K Thaw spent his first day in Pittsburg after his home coming last night, quietly at his mother's home in Beechwood boulevard. Only close personal friends of the family visited the house. An automobile ride to districts in Pittsburg which were familiar to Thaw in his boyhood, was on the program for this afternoon, but Thaw has developed a desire to avoid curious crowds.

He refused to state his future plans. At one time, he said, he had intended to become a lawyer, but he had given it up. He said he was too nervous to be a lawyer.

Thaw said that he intended to take in the San Francisco exposition, but his plans for going there are indefinite.

After I been telling all de cullud folks in de neighborhood dat I paid a dollar for this shirt waist, you come an' spoil my reputation for veracity. Las' time I ever gwine to do bizness here."

Efficiency Must Come First.

We usually think of revolutions as revolts against despotism, and as making for liberty. That isn't necessarily so. The great Roman revolution was a series of upheavals by which the Roman republic was transformed into an empire. The reason was that the republic failed in efficiency. That is why all persons with the historical sense feel that politicians who sacrifice efficiency to politics are in a very deep sense enemies to the republic.

DRESBACH FESTIVITIES

A pleasant feature of last Sunday was a picnic dinner and supper given at the pretty little summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. John Langdon. About twenty-four including the children sat down to a sumptuous dinner, and at six o'clock the long table was again spread with delicacies. Among those present from La Crosse were Mr. and Mrs. William Torrance and two children, Mrs. Elizabeth McKowen, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Newcomb, Mrs. Ann Langdon, the Misses Belle and Maud Boyd, Bessie Torrance, Alice Wheeler; the Dresbach people were Mr. and Mrs. Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Webster, Walter Webster, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Baker, Miss Margaret Baker, Jerome Baker, Mr. and Mrs. John Langdon and their daughter Isabell.

A DELIGHTFUL EVENING

Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Hart and Miss Blanche Hart gave a delightful musical entertainment last evening at the home of Mrs. Hart. Ethel Virgin O'Neil of Lucerne, Switzerland, gave an interesting program. Her numbers were selections from German, French and Italian operas. Mrs. O'Neil has studied in Europe for the past six years and has had much experience in grand opera. She has a soprano voice of great range and under perfect control and generously responded to the many encores. Mrs. O'Neil was assisted by Miss Florence Herman, who played a group of violin numbers for which she received many compliments. Miss Clara Larson and Miss Hart were accompanists. Mrs. O'Neil is the guest of Miss Blanche Hart. She will leave tonight as she has engagements in Milwaukee and other cities. At the close of the entertainment light refreshments were served.

GETS RIDE—ROBBED

CHICAGO, July 20.—Herman Williams, 22, fresh from Roscoe, Ill., hereafter will look all gift horses in the mouth. Herman was strolling through Grant Park yesterday when a man stopped a nice looking automobile and offered Williams a free ride. Without hesitation the visitor hopped in and was confronted by two charming blondes who told him there was plenty of room on the same seat. That's about all Herman remembers until two policemen found him unconscious in the rear of a saloon on the west side today.

A Full Measure of Health is the reward of those who live right and eat right.

And as fresh air, exercise, and good food are the principal factors, it is important that food be selected which contains the essential nutritive elements in well-balanced, easily digestible form.

In making the famous wheat and barley food,

Grape-Nuts

the malting of the barley brings out the diastase (the digestive element) while the long 20-hour baking breaks down the starch cells of the grains. Thus Grape-Nuts does not tax the digestion, but actually assists in the assimilation of other foods.

"BREAK WITH SMOKERS" TOBACCO FOE ADVISES AUDIENCE OF THREE

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 20.—Asserting that his father thought more of his cigar or his pipe than his wife, and advising all young women who are engaged to men with the tobacco habit to break with them immediately, Dr. Charles G. Pease of New York, president of the Non-Smokers' Protective League of America, opened the first annual convention of that organization here with three persons in his audience. One was a real delegate, the second was a press agent looking for a job, and the third a reporter.

"No woman can afford to occupy the house with a man who smokes,' said Dr. Pease today. "A wife for the good of future generations should compel her husband to live in another part of the house. I am in favor of the wife having the husband smoke on the back doorstep. He should not be allowed to smoke in the house. If they don't stop this smoking business our jails are going to be overcrowded."

Mrs. Wilson, the delegate, urged that we boycott the women who smoke or drink cocktails. She said cigarettes and cocktails were getting a hold on college girls and that something must be done to counteract this.

BOARD TO COMPRISE SEVERAL SCIENTIFIC SOCIETIES MEMBERS

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The size of Secretary Daniels' naval board of invention and development will depend on the selections made by the eight scientific societies he has asked to name two members each, the secretary said today.

He intends to have Thomas A. Edison for chairman whether the societies choose him or not. If one of them does select him the membership may be limited to sixteen. If not, the secretary will appoint him, which will make seventeen.

SELECTS SUCCESSOR FOR ARCHBISHOP

CHICAGO, July 20.—The name of the probable successor to Archbishop Quigley is on its way to Rome today. The name, with those of two others who have been prominently mentioned for the high Catholic post, were chosen Friday, it was announced today at a meeting of the consulting pastors of the archdiocese. They were ratified by the Archdiocesan bishops and sent to Pope Benedict sealed. It was confidently expected today that the Holy Father would pick one of the three suggested.

FAIL TO IDENTIFY VICTIM OF TRAIN

Police and local railroad authorities have failed to establish the identity of the man whose body was found inside the Burlington railroad tracks north of Grand Crossing yesterday morning, mangled by having been struck by a train. Outside of the statement of Tony Wislowski, that the man was a laborer employed on a section crew at Camp 88, near Wyalusing, on the Burlington, nothing further has been found. The foreman of the construction crew reported that several men who answered to the description of the man killed here had recently quit the crew. The body will be buried tomorrow morning at the county farm.

AGED MAN BROKEN BY FAMILY REBUFF STILL A PRISONER

Man Who Came Back After 13 Years with Girl He Brought from Ireland Is Held in Investigation

Jerry Daley, seventy years old and paralyzed, remains in central police station, a prisoner, while County Poor Commissioner Sol Burdick is investigating his story—the story of his love for an Irish girl which led him to desert his wife and ten children on a prosperous farm near Tomah for a life of drudgery on a mean little farm near Alvin, Texas.

The Irish girl, whom he calls Mrs. Kate Daley, is being cared for at the county poor farm.

Whether Daley is prosecuted on the evidence he has given against himself or is set free does not seem to concern him. He is broken hearted because his family refused a few days ago to receive him.

Thirteen years ago, Daley told Burdick, he decided to visit his birthplace in Ireland. He left his family in good faith, he said, but met "Kate." He returned to America with her, and since then they have lived together in Texas.

Daley saved up a few dollars, according to his tale, and started north with the woman he called his wife on a double mission.

He had hoped to be cured of his ailment by physicians at Rochester, Minn., and he intended to visit his family near Tomah. They made their journey here by train, and Daley left his wife at the poor farm. He then went to Rochester, and returning visited his old Tomah farm and his family.

"They refused to look at me," sobbed Daley, in telling his story, "and now I don't care—I don't care."

The police will await the outcome of Burdick's investigation before placing a charge against the man.

ATTACK UPON THE SEAMEN'S SAFETY ACT IS DENOUNCED

La Follette Declares Country Is Being Victimizd by Conspiracy to Defeat the Bill

CALLS BEAR STORIES FALSE

Pacific Mail Company Not Quitting Because of the Law He Says and Hits Press

MADISON, Wis., July 20.—(Special.)—That the ship owners of the country are maintaining a clever campaign to deceive the American public about the effect of the seamen's act is the claim of Senator Robert M. La Follette in a statement made public today.

"This country is made the victim of a vicious and menacing conspiracy," declares Senator La Follette. "The shipping interest is putting forth every resource known to unscrupulous business to discredit the seamen's law. Through obliging commercial organizations, comercial city dailies, subservient magazines, interested news agencies and other instrumentalities that show a startling willingness to serve special interests at the expense of the public interest, the ship owners of the United States and those of other countries are seeking to prevent the enforcement of the great humane act passed by the last congress."

Senator La Follette riddles the statement often quoted in the inspired news dispatches and business men's resolutions that the Pacific Mail Steamship company is going out of business because of this law. He says that the real facts are that the Pacific Mail is separating itself from the Southern Pacific railway in order to comply with the terms of the Panama canal act. After detailing the reason for this change Senator La Follette's editorial in his magazine today says:

"Let the reading public beware! This despicable attempt to embarass the president of the United States in carrying out the terms of the seamen's law should not be permitted to succeed. It is prompted by cupidity and carried out by falsehood. Public opinion should demand that the terms of the seamen's law be carried out to the last letter. This great special interest should not be permitted even with the willing aid of great newspapers(and it has been shown that more than $2,000,000 is yearly distributed to American public concerning this measure of emancipation—emancipation from legalized slavery for the seaman and emancipations from dangers at sea by the traveling public."

The senator leclares there is nothing in the law to work a hardship upon an American vessel compared with foreign vessels.

WELSH MINERS STRIKE IS ENDED BY LLOYD GEORGE

Situation That Threatened the Production of Munitions Brought to Close After Conference

TRIUMPH FOR LLOYD GEORGE

Owners Agree to Ten Per Cent Increase to Continue for Short Time After the War

CARDIFF, July 20.—The great strike of South Wales coal miners that threatened to interfere seriously with the production of war munitions for the English armies, has been settled it was announced early this evening. Strike leaders made the announcement, following a short conference late this afternoon with Minister of Munitions Lloyd George and other members of the cabinet who had just come from a protracted session with the colliery owners. The terms have not yet been made public but it is understood they are of such a nature that the executive council of the miners' federation is positive they will be ratified at once by the delegates to the miners' conference.

The settlement of the labor dispute, the most seriously domestic trouble that has confronted the English government since the war, is regarded here as a personal triumph for Lloyd George, whose home is in Wales. Lloyd George came to Cardiff last night after President Runciman of the board of trade and other government officials had made vain attempts to bring about an agreement.

Partial details of the settlement were made public this evening showing that the miners had won important concessions.

The owners agreed to a minimum ten per cent increase over the new standard of wages, which fixed a fifty per cent increase over the standard of 1889. This scale of wages will remain in force until six months after the close of the war and will continue in effect after the expiration of that period until one side serves notice three months in advance of a desire to abrogate the agreement.

PHILIPP VETOES SALOON OPENING ON ELECTION DAY

Grell Bill Sent Back Without Signature as Well as the Bill Repealing "U" Building Appropriation

MADISON, Wis., July 20.—Gov. Philipp this morning vetoed the Grell bill allowing the opening of saloons after the closing of the polls and on any primary election day or special election day.

"The law which forbids the sale of liquor on election days has been on our statute books fifty-six years," said the governor. "I know of no former effort to amend it and I believe it to be the will of the people of Wisconsin that it be continued without change."

The governor also sent back without his approval the bill repealing the appropriations made in 1913 for a liberal art building at the university and a new shop building, amounting to $200,000. The bill, he says, is defective and should be constructed to cover the point.

With less than forty members of the house present today, all important measures were laid over. The following bills were engrossed:

Kurtenacker — Fees for registration of nurses paid into state treasury.

Judiciary—Allowing governor to employ executive counsel during legislature.

Finance—Making an appropriation of $7,125 for the board of trustees of state library.

Banking—Providing for taxation of all mineral rights. The Kubasta amendment providing that presence of minerals had to be established was killed.

Hansen—To create a committee to settle the swamp land claims of the state with the federal government.

A substitute amendment to the bill providing for the creation of a Twenty-first judicial district was introduced this morning by Assemblyman Dickie of Sauk county. The amendment provides for the appointment of another circuit judge by the governor until January 1917, when the people are to elect a judge.

Discuss Appropriations

The senate this morning spent the greater portion of the morning in the discussion of appropriation bills.

Action on the Ackley resolution directing the finance committee to submit all appropriation bills to the governor before introduction also went over.

The senate will go into committee of the whole at two o'clock this afternoon on the Ploeger bill, detaching territory from Shawano county preparatory to the creation of the county of Burke.

REMINGTON ARMS STRIKE IS CALLED SEE GERMAN HAND

Four Hundred Machinists Walk Out but Men in Big Plant Did Not Respond

LABOR IS NOT CONCERNED

Morrison Declares Question of German Influence Is Not Issue of Walk-out

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 20.—The six hundred employers of the Remington Arms company called out on strike at noon today did not walk out, it was learned late this afternoon. Union officials charged that the Remington officials refused to allow the employes to leave during the lunch hour and that word to strike did not reach them. They will be notified at 5 o'clock this afternoon of the strike order, union officials said, and are expected to join the 400 employes from other factories that did strike today.

Besides the machinists in the Remington plant, machinists in the Bridgeport Engineering company, Columbia Nut and Bolt company, Gaynor Manufacturing company, and in the Bullard Machine Tool company also were called out. The four companies are working on Remington contracts.

Approximately 1,000 machinists in Bridgeport were affected by the strike order. It was said by labor officials that they would all be out by tonight.

Germany Not the Issue

WASHINGTON, July 20.—"The American Federation of Labor does not care whether German gold started the Bridgeport strike or not," said Secretary Morrison today. "We have heard that said. I do not know definitely how true it is. If it is true, we cannot blame Germany's representative, whoever he may be, for doing it.

"The big point to the American Federation of Labor is that agitation has been started in the Bridgeport and New Haven field for better working conditions. The A. F. of L. will do all in its power to make the Remington Arms company's machinists' strike the stepping stone to a thorough organization of that poorly organized field.

WILSON PLANNING BLANKET PROTEST TO GREAT BRITAIN

WASHINGTON, July 20.—At a conference this afternoon between President Wilson and Senator Bankhead, the president gave further indications of intending to send a blanket protest to Great Britain against its interference with American commerce to neutral countries. Bankhead said he was convinced that President Wilson was doing everything possible to secure concessions from Great Britain.

VISIT GYPSIES TO SOLVE MYSTERY OF LOST HORSE

Big Bay Belonging to Oyen Sign Company Disappears from the Barn Some Time During Night

Captain Larry Dugan of the police department and Louis Oyen visited the camp of gypsy horse traders north of Grand Crossing this afternoon in an attempt to solve the mystery surrounding the disappearance of a big bay horse from the barn of the Oyen Sign company some time last night.

The door of the barn was found open and the horse gone at 5 o'clock this morning. No trace of the horse was found in the neighborhood, and the owners incline to believe that the horse was stolen.

Mr. Oyen reported to the police this morning that the gypsy traders refused to allow anyone to approach their camp.

hours of fighting. Prisoners taken ot other sectors of the long battle front raise the total number of captives to more than 50,000.

In the Riga region, in the extreme north, General von Bulow's forces have occupied Tukum and are continuing their advance against Riga now less than forty miles away. Von Bulow's cavalry is over-running the Windau river driving the Russians back in panicky retreat.

"Between the Vistula and the Pilica the enemy continues his retreat eastward. Between the Upper Vistula and the Bog, General Mackensen fighting all day, defeated the Russians despite desperate resistance at Groboviec, twenty miles southeast og Krasnotaf, inflicting severe losses. In this same region Mackensen forced a crossing of the River Volica.

"North of Sokol, Austrian forces have crossed the River Bug, the enemy retreating slowly and offering stubborn resistance."

Petrograd Admits Reverses

PETROGRAD, July 20.—The war office frankly admitted today that the Russians have been driven from their positions and forced to retire at half a dozen points under heavy pressure from the kaiser's armies marching against Warsaw.

In the extreme north, the Germans advancing toward the great naval base of Riga have occupied the Tukum. North of Warsaw von Hindenburg's center has captured the village of Porely and is engaged in continuous assaults against the Russion lines north of the Narew river.

tinuous assaults against the Russian have been forced to evacuate Krasnotaf, eight miles south of the Lublin-Cholm railway, toward which General Mackensen's center is attempting to batter its way. North of Lemberg the armies of General Ivanoff have been driven eastward by superior forces of Austrians.

At several points, however, the Russians are maintaining themselves against the heaviest attacks and hurling the enemy back with severe losses.

BIG HYDRO-AEROPLANE OF NEW TYPE BEING TESTED NEAR WASHINGTON; IS CAPABLE OF CARRYING 20 PASSENGERS

Capable of carrying twenty passengers or a considerable quantity of freight and looking like two ordinary biplanes built into one, the huge Richardson hydro-aeroplane is being tested at Alexandria, Va., across the Potomac river from Washington. A. S. Richardson of Lowell, Mass., is the inventor and owner and A. C. Richardson did the actual work of building. The distinguishing feature is the arrangement of the planes. It has four on each side, two in front and two in tandem form behind. According to the inventor, the doubling of the planes not only increases the lifting power but also increases the craft's stability.

WISCONSIN EXHIBIT MEASURES UP WITH ANY AT THE "EXPO"

MADISON, Wis., July 20.—(Special.)—"I hope our people appreciate the splendid showing made by Wisconsin at the exposition," said Congressman James A. Frear of Hudson, in an interview there Friday on his return from the Pacific coast and Hawaii. Mr. Frear and family were members of the congressional delegation which visited Honolulu.

"On a $75,000 appropriation," continued Congressman Frear, "we have measured up with states that have spent several times that amount, all of which is to the credit of the state and the commission in charge. Mr. Bowe, the secretary in charge of the Wisconsin building, is doing excellent work, and Mrs. Taylor of Superior, the Wisconsin hostess, is a 'jewel' and has made the state building a home for Wisconsin people. The building is a fine structure, well furnished, and a credit to the state. Every Wisconsinite who visits the exposition should go to the state building.

"Our agricultural exhibit is second only to that of California in its general scope. Nine gold medals, apart from bronze and honorary prizes galore, have been given to Wisconsin by the exposition managers. Mrs. Adda Howis, the lady in charge, is a remarkable manager, and says we have received three times the number of medals hoped for. One feature that is especially pleasing is that all the honors to Wisconsin were given exclusive of our dairy products, which were not exhibited. With them added, California would have been pressed closely although that state has spent many times our appropriation in making its display.

"The educational exhibit for Wisconsin is also good and reflects credit on the state equal to the agricultural exhibit. Our university has been given space in different departments and the old familiar "U. of W." greets the visitor frequently in the educational buildings.

"Altogether we have reason to be proud of our state's exhibit, and after traveling around for some weeks I believe I reflect the sentiment of our own people when I say the only way to appreciate Wisconsin is to go away and then come back. Others rival us in some particulars, but there is a fly in the ointment every time until we get back to God's country."

FROHSINN SINGERS LEAVE TODAY FOR OMAHA FESTIVAL

Robert Isler's Song-birds in Special Car Start Out for Northwestern Saengerfest at Omaha This Morning

Led by Director Robert Isler, Frohsinn singers to the number of fourteen started off on a special car this morning to take part in the annual northwestern saengerfest, which is held at Omaha this year. The singers met at Frohsinn hall before the start, formed up and marched to the Milwaukee station, where they sang a song before boarding their car. The party included: Robert Isler, director; first tenors, Louis Weigel, George Albrecht, Adolph and Matt Seiler and Charles Bitzer; second tenors, Ernest Gillmeister and Geo. Stangl; first bass, George Weihaupt and Albert Pust; second bass, John G. Malin, John Spellinger, Albert Niggli and Oscar Doering.

F. R. A. EXCURSION TOMORROW NIGHT

The annual F. R. A. excursion, which is always an event in river trips, will be held tomorrow night. The G. W. ITCHING, BLISTERED SKIN-ERUPTION ALL HIS LIFE, NOW CURED

Nov. 19, 1914:—"All my life, until about a year ago, I was troubled with blisters and sores over my entire body. The itching and burning was terrible, and I could hardly sleep. I used many treatments that were unsuccessful and did not give me any relief. I started using Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and they helped me wonderfully. I WAS RELIEVED AT ONCE, and after about two dozen applications I can say that I was free and cured of that awful disease. My skin now is as clear as anybody's."—(Signed) Geo. Whitcher, Jr., R. F. D. TICKING SKIRTS NOW ARE MODISH

Material of the Blue and White Striped Ruck Worn by Stylish Folks

BY MARGARET MASON
(Written for the United Press.)

There are clocks upon her stockings
Her skirt is ticking too
Indeed a much more timely maid
'Twere hard to find for you.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Stop, look and listen! Have you heard the new skirt?—it's ticking. It's also quite loud. It's fast too—fast colors. Mostly colored in blue and white stripes like the Ostermoors are made of. There are other color combinations in all the new shades combinaed with white that prove even more effective skirting the summer girls than covering the husks and breakfast food of a summer mattress.

Worn with the sheer white organdie blouses or those blouses trimmed with pastel tinted batiste or linen these ticking skirts are particularly good. They are usually made with the quaint and yet practical applied side pockets of the present mode and are ideal for the country, the shore or any sport as well as being equally appropriate and smart for morning town and street wear. With cretonne and ticking both being so extensively worn the old adage "Make your bed and lie in it" must needs now be changed to "unmake your bed and dress in it." The gist of the matter in a few words is if you would be chic wear tick. So hasten and get tick on you even if you have to first get it on tick.

It seems as if Dame Fashion were kidding us. In our weakest spot, too—the head. If you have noticed the very newest of the new tiny turbans you already know it's a kid without my telling you. Dainty little all white kid affairs are the very smartest kind with a close second in a magpie black and white kid combination. Others there are developed in kid of any delicate pastel shade but it is the all white kid hat that has the sanction of most fastidious approval.

Before we pass the hat entirely it is well to mention the broad trimmed chateau so prevalent for the nonce that is made of an open work straw mesh not unlike a basket but nearer a replica of the common or garden caneseat in a kitchen chair. They come in all colors and their brims are bound in a contrasting tint of ribbon. They are simply trimmed in a posy or so or a mere band of the same binding ribbon around the crown.

Mrs. Vernon Castle has the responsibility for this faddy confection at her door along with so many other charmingly quaint sartorial indiscretions. It is true that the summer girl affecting this cane seated hat is apt to be spotted both by the son of man and the sun of heaven. But after all what could be more delightfully appropriate than that the seat of a maid's intelligence be cane seated as 'twere.

At last the glove-like Italian silk so long confined merely to the shaping of undergarments has burst its lingerie bounds and stepped into the outer garment class. It is now being used not only for lovely long sweater like sport coats and Norfolk jacket effects in all the brightest hues but stunning blouses are now fashioned of it in lovely tones of Old blue, gold and rose. Not to mention many chaste bodices of pure white and a few in the same flesh tints that are decidedly reminiscent of its undergarment uses.

Just why this loosely meshed and woven silk should be dubbed Italian or Milanese silk is indeed a poser since it is an unknown quantity as well as quality in the land of buried Caesars. With underwear material being so flagrantly pressed into service for outerwear it is obvious that an exclusive new material be evolved for wear next to the skin. Judging from a sample of flesh colored silken garments exposed in a Fifth Avenue lingerie shop I should say that the newest open work lace mesh silk now offered for next to skin wear is also next to nothing.

CHIGGERS COME IN FOR SEASON

Department of Agriculture Tells How to Fight the Insects This Season

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The annual visit of the chigger is on. Throughout the Mississippi valley states, as far north as Illinois and Missouri and extending across to the Atlantic coast states, the chigger is making himself known wherever people picnic or work in the long grass, though some call him the harvest mite and others merely the red bug. Barefoot boys know him best and love him least.

The chigger's habit is to affix himself with all his eight legs to the boy's bare shin—or to worm himself in some mysterious manner through a picnicker's silken hosiery—enter the pores of the skin and stay there. In a few hours the spot becomes very painful and causes intense itching. The large inflamed spots are often diagnosed as hives, nettle rash, urticaria, or wheals, and closely resembles the bite of mosquitoes. On the second or third day a minute water blister usually develops. If a bath in hot water or water containing soap or salt is taken within a few hours, no ill effects are likely.

A person walking through vegetation is attacked mostly from the knees down, and an agricultural department bulletin suggests sifting flowers of sulphur in the underclothing from the knees downward and into the shoes and stockings. Napthalene is also successfully used in the same manner and is a safeguard against several other forms of manifesting tropical insects.

Where a large area is to be rid of the mites, it is recommended by the bulletin that the grass be cut closely, weeds eliminated and useless herbiage mowed as closely as feasible, so as to expose the mites to the sun. It may be practical to spray the grass after cutting with flowers of sulphur or a dilute spray of kerosene emulsion in which sulphur has been mixed.

Bermuda grass, called the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of the grass family, is coming in for considerable discussion among agriculturists. Wire grass, as it is commonly named, may be a valuable forage plant or a serious weed pest, as circumstances determine. By sending out shoots at frequent intervals, Bermuda grass forms a close sod, which has its good points where forage grass is wanted.

It is the most valuable pasture grass in the South, but when it gets a start in a cotton field or other cultivated fields it is difficult of control. In Arizona and Southern California it has proved such an enemy of the alfalfa crop that they have named it devil grass.

As a forage plant, its valuable properties are resistance to heat, drought and trampling by livestock, though it is quite susceptible to frost. Thus it is chiefly of value in states no farther north than Virginia and Kentucky. Cut early, Bermuda grass makes good hay and two crops ordinarily can be cut each year. A rich, moist soil will yield several tons an acre. Pastures and meadows should be plowed every few years, otherwise becoming sod bound.

CHANGE OF POLICY WOULD DISPLEASE GERMAN PEOPLE

Opinion Is Given by Red Cross Director Recently Back from Tour of War Zone

WASHINGTON, July 20.—That Germany cannot modify her submarine warfare to any extent without offending all her people, was the opinion expressed here by Ernest P. Bicknell, director of the Red Cross National relief.

Bicknell spent several months in the war zone as a member of the war relief commission of the Rockefeller foundation.

"I was particularly impressed with the solidarity of the German people," said he. "As a whole, they are united on the question of fighting to the last ditch, if ever any people were. I feel sure they would be offended if the government were to yield to the American demand.

"I cannot say I ever witnessed any anti-American feeling, though I spent several months going through Germany. There was one demonstration after another against the English language itself and the moment the language was heard there was objection in some form, but when it was found that the speaker was an American the soldier would politely apologize. I witnessed several such incidents. The American ambassador, Mr. Gerard, aroused several Germans in the theater one evening in Berlin simply by his English and a German soldier had to go to his aid.

"The end of the war is not in sight so far as food supply is concerned. I noticed conditions in Germany and Austria-Hungary which convinced me that those countries cannot be starved, but can feed their armies as far as one can see. The bread supply is very carefully conserved in Germany. Each morning bread tickets are issued allowing only a fraction over a half loaf a day to the holder. In the hotels and restaurants this ticket is punched as he buys his bread.

"In Hungary I saw endless stretches of magnificent wheat and rye. Last fall the German people were talking about ending the war in a few months, but it has been a long time since I have heard any of that kind of talk. Evidently they have prepared for a long struggle.

In all the other countries at war there is no question of food shortage. People everywhere seem to be thinking of nothing but fighting. There is a disposition in all countries at war to hold tightly to every bushel of wheat. We tried everywhere to get wheat for relief work but everywhere except in Russia we were turned down.

"Belgium is rapidly getting on its feet. Bumper crops can be seen in all sections.

"It is very different in Poland. In fact, I am not prepared to say relief is possible there by ordinary methods such as we are trying. The Poles have neither the men nor money to raise crops. We appealed to German officials for wheat to feed those in their conquered Polish territory. The answer we got was that Germany would have to keep all her wheat for her own people."

"Whys" of Moves in European War

NEW YORK, July 20.—Reports that the Germans are now on the offensive along the entire eastern battle front of a thousand miles, are probably untrue. A tendency is discernible in London greatly to magnify the collapse that has overtaken the Russians. The Germans apparently are being credited by Englishmen with possessing super-human ability and even Petrograd's fall is being mentioned in England as a future possibility.

No such interpretation of the military events in the east is possible except under stress of deep pessimism. If the Germans attempt to advance in four widely separated areas, as is said to be their present purpose they must fail. The lack of success which has followed the division of Marshal Von Mackensen's forces after the fall of Lemberg is a warning to the Germans as to what they must expect if they increase the two objectives which Von Mackensen attempted, to four.

The operations now proceeding in the Baltic provinces, and, which are the cause of England's fear for the safety of Petrograd, cannot possibly be on a major scale if at the same time the Germans persist in their drives against Warsaw from northwest and southeast, and continue as well the final operations in Eastern Galicia. There is not enough ammunition in Austro-Hungary and Germany to permit so gigantic an undertaking to succeed.

Nor is it at all likely that there is even enough ammunition to permit advances to be made on Warsaw from two directions. Either Von Mackensen must remain quiescent in the southeast or the northwestern must be content with purely local gains. In all probability Von Mackensen will try to go forward again and his offensive will continue to be the major thrust against the Russian line. In that case, the northwestern activity now being credited in London to Von Hindenberg is no more than a diversion, planned for the purpose of preventing the Russians concentrating the great part of their forces against Von Mackensen's advance.

WARSHIPS ORDERED TO SANTO DOMINGO

WASHINGTON, July 20. — The warship Nashville was ordered yesterday from San Juan, P. R., to Santo Domingo city.

This was at the request of the state department which was worried concerning foreigners' safety, owing to revolutionary troubles.

The Paducah was sent to San Juan, where there are several interned German ships to be watched.

SENATORS WIN IN FIRST ON EIGHT PILFERED BASES

Boston Tightens Hold Over Sox by Lacing the White Hose 6 to 4

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Senators, 11; Indians, 4

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 20.—What is believed a world's record was established yesterday when the Washington team stole eight bases in the first inning. This wholesale pilfering helped the Nationals pile up six runs against Hagerman and Jones, the visitors finally winning 11 to 4. Score:

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

BY HAL SHERIDAN

(Written for the United Press.)

Yesterday's Homers

Shelton, Browns, off Caldwell, Yankees.

Cravath, Phils, off Humphries, Cubs.

Bancroft, Phils, off Standridge, Cubs.

Fournier, White Sox, off Leonard, Red Sox.

Engle, Buffeds, off Knetzer, Pittfeds.

Kauff, Brookfeds, off Beck, Chicago.

It must make Hughey Jennings awfully sore to sit back and watch the Red Sox and White Sox cut each other's throats.

Yesterday was a hard day for St. Louis—the Cards dropped to the second division, the Browns were licked in a double-header and the Federals lost.

The Braves took their fifth straight game, Rudolph and Gowdy up. Somebody had better tie down their back teeth, because the breeze is freshening.

Cleveland dropped its fifth straight game to the Senators. President Wilson should declare a holiday in honor of Clarke Griffith.

The Cubs took another licking at Philadelphia and dropped back to a tie with the Superbas for second place.

The Senators stole eight bases in the first inning off Steve O'Neill. Steve swallowed his false teeth and saved them.

Those Red Sox go right ahead adding to their lead. They licked the White Sox again without using Mr. Wood at all.

The Terrible Tigers made thirteen hits and twelve runs off three of Mr. Mack's collegiate chuckers.

ATHLETES NAMED TO GO TO COAST

CHICAGO, July 20.—Coach Stagg today named the five men to represent the University of Chicago at the Panama-Pacific championship meets. They are: Dismond, Stegeman, Knight, Campbell and Bresthed.

The Illinois Athletic club will start the following seven athletes to San Francisco next Tuesday: Joie Ray, Meyers, Lighter, Ahearn, Knourek, Richards and Cole.

GOLFERS FINISH QUALIFYING PLAY

CLEVELAND, O., July 20.—A cool day and fairly dry courses brought predictions of low scores in the last leg of the qualifying round of the Western Golf association tournament at the Mayfield club today. The course was out Monday night in an effort to speed up play. The qualifying round will be finished at 1 o'clock in time for the first match play this afternoon.

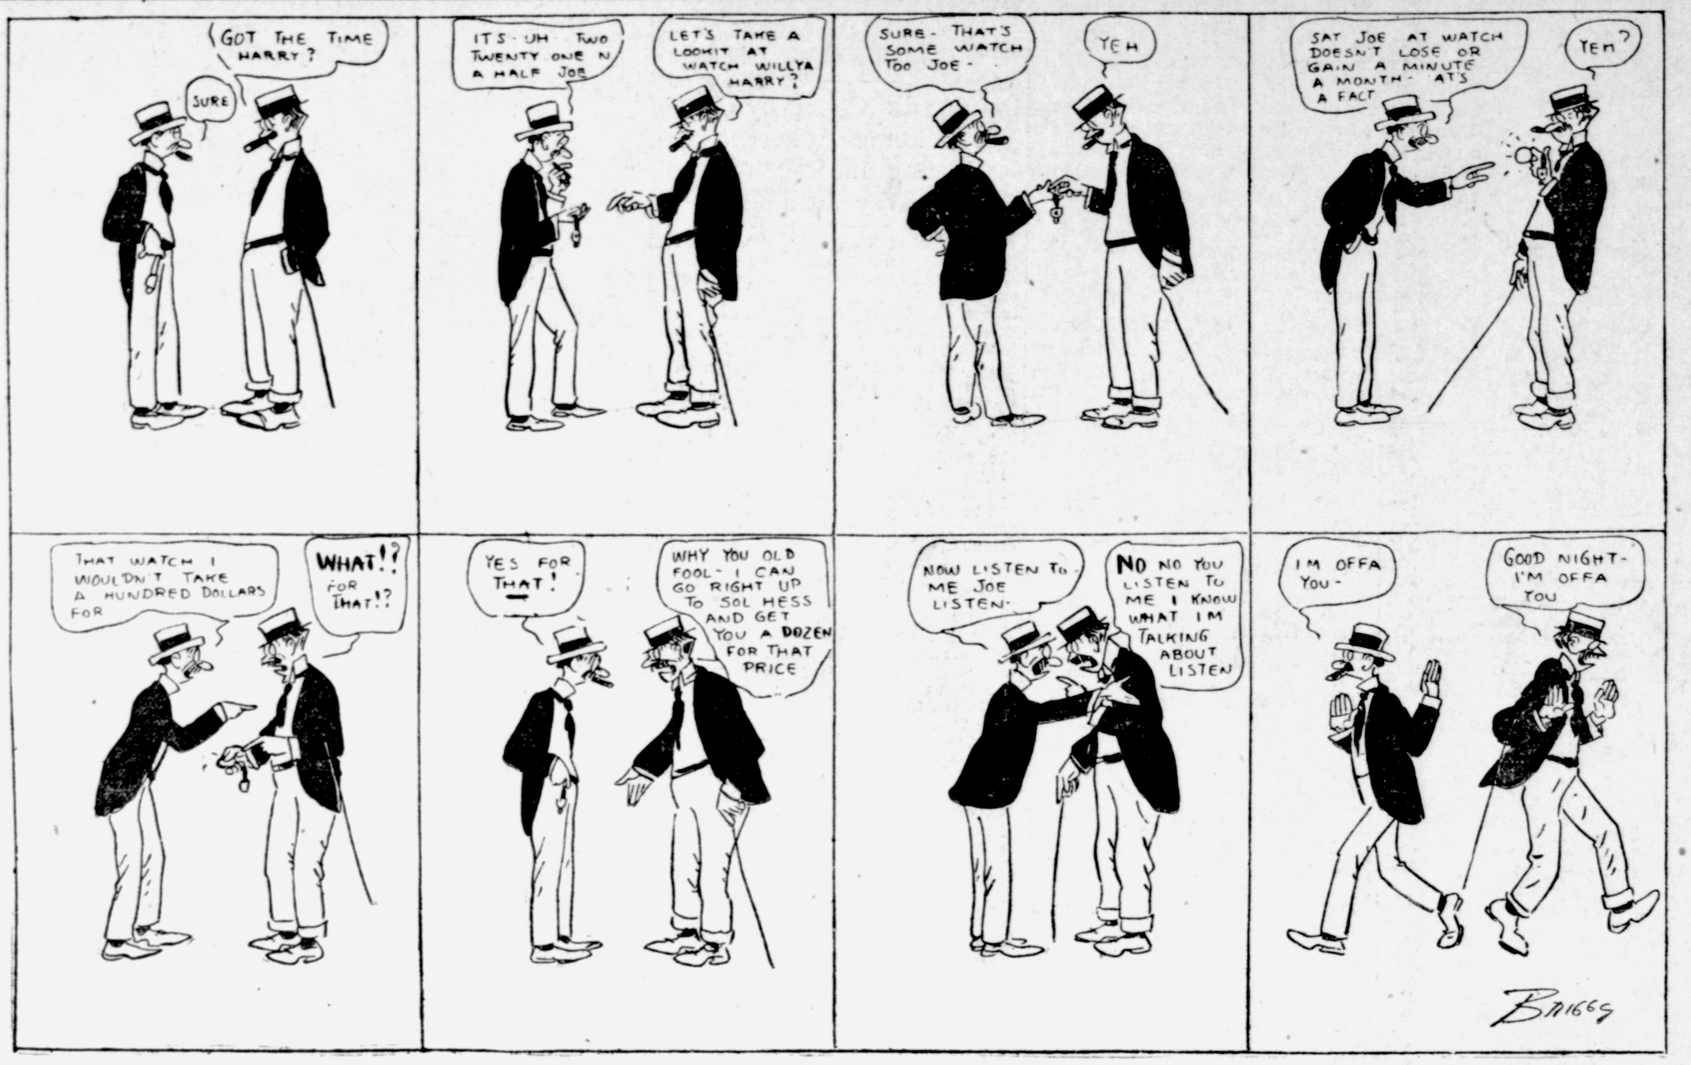
You Can Quarrel on Any Subject - - - - - - By Briggs



THE GOOD JUDGE WAS PUZZLED AT FIRST

CROWDS of men in every community using the Real Tobacco Chew —because it satisfies them better than any of the old kind.

When men who for years have tried brand after brand get started on the Real Tobacco Chew, you can bet that they're glad they've got it.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED. RIGHT-CUT IS SHORT SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

"Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste."

LOUVAIN A CITY FILLED WITH PATHOS

City Burned by Germans Found Partially Recovered by Correspondent

BY CARL W. ACKERMAN

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LOUVAIN, Belgium, May 11.—By Mail to New York.—Louvain is full of surprises and filled with pathos. One is surprised to find at least seven-tenths of the city untouched by the fire which the German army kindled to punish sniping warfare. One is surprised to see the Hotel de Ville still standing with not a trace of smoke, fire or shell. The beautiful carved statued facade is as white as paper. One is surprised, too, to see the progress the inhabitants are making in cleaning and rebuilding their ruined city.

But all this cheerfulness in a city that was thought to be dead is almost covered up by the pathetic faces of the inhabitants whose homes were ruined.

I traveled through Louvain today by automobile. I tramped through the center of the city, examined the interior of the cathedral and later rode through the city on the train and saw the blocks and blocks of brick walls, pierced and blackened but which one day were homes and stores. Louvain is undoubtedly a martyred city.

Colonel Burmonn of the German army, who was our guide, was one of the first Germans to enter Louvain. He knows the history of the fighting and fire better than probably any other soldier now in Belgium. No one pities Louvain and its inhabitants more than this big German officer. The fire was started, he said, only as a last desperate effort of the Germans to stop the sniping warfare. Thousands of Germans, he declared, were shot down as they marched through the city. In the cathedral alone he said the Germans found 400 Belgian rifles and many boxes of ammunition.

Art Treasures in Basement

Today the art treasures of Louvain are securely packed in the basement of the Hotel de Ville. The art world owes the safety of these priceless works to a young German art student who was with the invading army. When this boy, who has studied in Louvain university, heard that the city would be set afire he rushed to the commander, told him of these valuable treasures. This youth then mapped out the location of these treasures and under his guidance they were removed from the burning territory to the basement of safety.

I was told that most of the paintings from the cathedral were saved but as I tramped about in the ruins I counted six large oil paintings still on the walls of the church but entirely unharmed. This cathedral appears to be about half destroyed. On one side the paintings and beautiful black and white marble altars are untouched. On the other only the bare stone walls remain. The church chimes have fallen from the loft to the cathedral floor and broken into a score of pieces.

Ruins Guarded

But Louvain's ruins are guarded as precious treasures by the inhabitants. The only souvenirs travelers pick up are postcards and the dust on their shoes.

Should you wish a bird's eye view of Louvain imagine a city shaped like a large wheel with ten spokes running from the axle or center. Picture to yourself the cathedral, Hotel de Ville and Louvain university around the hub. The spokes are city streets and between are the houses and stores, for Louvain was a city of 40,000 people. Imagine then that a fire swept away the houses between three spokes and destroyed everything around the hub except the Hotel de Ville and the cathedral. Then you will see Louvain today.

Now stand before the Hotel de Ville and look to the west. Not a house or building is touched by fire or shell. A short distance away read the sign: "Cafe de Wilson." Now turn to the left and you see more city streets untouched and crowded with inhabitants. Business going on as usual. Nearby you read another sign: "Hotel de American." In a nearby restaurant you will find bread as white as you eat in America, for it's bread made from American wheat which the Belgian relief commission is supplying.

Down the street which we travel enroute to Brussels you will see workmen piling up bricks from the ruined houses—for the inhabitants headed by the mayor are trying their best to rebuild the city.

Louvain is full of surprises and filled with pathos. But from what I saw today I do not believe it is a dead city. It will rise some day out of its ruins for with seven-tenths of the city untouched by fire or shell, with the beautiful Hotel de Ville still standing to inspire the people, it needs only peaceful, normal times to grow and prosper.

MILWAUKEE MAN REPRESENTS ROADS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 20.—W. J. Cannon, assistant general passenger agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway has been selected by the forty-six roads of the west, northwest and southwest to be their expert witness before the interstate commerce commission in the petition for increased interstate passenger rates.

With Advancing Years.

I do not say we ought to be happier as we grow older, but we ought to be calmer, knowing what life is, and looking forward to another, which we believe to be a reality, though we cannot tell what it means.—Jewett.

TAUBES DESTROYED BY BRITISH CRAFT

Three Air Machines Lost in Air Battle Off the Mouth of Thames Recently

LONDON, July 20.—Three big German Taubes were destroyed in a battle royal in the air with twelve fast British aeroplanes off the mouth of the Thames the other day, according to circumstantial stories circulated here.

The German birdmen are reported to have crossed the North sea, intending to raid the English coast. Approaching shore they maneuvered in wide circles. English aviators rushed to the attack by twos and threes.

The Germans tilted upward to a great height, hotly pursuer. Thousands of feet below, watchers, who gathered on the shore heard the faint sputter of motor exhausts, and the crack of rifles and pistols. Four British planes first came in contact with the Germans and as others joined in the battle the Germans were cut off in their retreat seaward. The foremost Taube was seen to fall. Then a second shot downward in a mass of flames, plunging beneath the waves. The fight by this time had moved so far seaward that spectators along the coast could no longer trace the tiny specks among the clouds.

The following day naval boats found one of the German planes floating on the water, its occupants strapped to their seats with bullet-holes in their heads. The fourth Taube is reported to have been lost.

COST OF LIVING GOING UP AGAIN

CHICAGO, July 20.—The cost of living is edging skyward again. But hope for lower prices in the near future is good, according to Sol Westerfield, chairman of the relations committee of the National Retail Grocers' association.

According to Chairman Westerfield, meat, cabbages, flour, sugar, apples and beans are all higher today than they were one year ago. The war is chiefly the cause. Prices of eggs, butter, potatoes and lemons are slightly lower.

"A barrel of flour today costs from $1.80 to $2.40 per barrel more at wholesale than it did last year," said Westerfield. "However, there should be a decrease of $1 per barrel within a month, because of the proximity of the new wheat crop, which has been much delayed by the unusual rainy spell."

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, July 20.—Wheat was sharply lower today. July was up at the start while September and December were down compared with yesterday's close. Then the clearing weather and improved crop conditions generally got in the effect causing recessions from the opening of 3½c, 1¾c and 1½c.

Corn and oats closely followed the wheat trend which, together with the effect of the better weather on those grains, caused declines.

Provisions, which started higher to lower, fell off toward afternoon.

WILL TACK BOOST ON INSURANCE TAX

Albers Reduction Bill Is Not Satisfactory to the Philipp's Forces and Levy Will Be Raised

STEMPER BILL TO BE TINKERED

Senate Recalls Bill from House to Be Further Repaired at Wednesday Session

MADISON, Wis., July 20.—(Special.)—It is understood that friends of the administration are not satisfied with the Albers bill, 55-S, reducing life insurance taxes, in the form in which it recently passed the legislature. Last night Senator Ackley introduced a joint resolution to recall the bill from the governor for purposes of amendment. The resolution will be acted upon Wednesday. It is said it is proposed to extract more revenue from life insurance companies by an amendment increasing the rate of tax from 3 to 4 per cent. This increase was advocated by former Commissioner Ekern before he left the department.

The senate is not yet through with the Stemper liquor license bill. The senate last night adopted a resolution by Senator Hanson to reconsider the vote by which the bill was messaged to the assembly Friday. It will be acted upon Wednesday. It is intended to try to reconsider the vote by which the Bray amendment was adopted. This gave the police chief in all cities power to "disapprove" locations to be reinstated or re-licensed. The clause originally read "to approve."

Senator Ackley introduced a joint resolution providing that all appropriation bills be reported by the finance committee to the governor before going to either house of the legislature.

Makes Many Jobs

The finance committee submitted a substitute to the Johnson bill, 335-A, relating to the fire marshal's office, now merged with the insurance department. It makes the insurance commissioner ex-officio fire marshal, with power to appoint necessary deputies. The deputy commissioner may be appointed chief assistant fire marshal. His salary, now $2,500, is to be fixed by the commissioner. Salaries of other employes of the department are to be fixed by the commissioner subject to the approval of the governor. Salaries and expenses of all attorneys to prosecute arson cases shall not exceed $4,000 per year. The attorney general is to assist district attorneys in the prosecution of arson cases.

The abolition of the state fair at Milwaukee and the creation of an annual agricultural exhibition at the college of agriculture in Madison as proposed in the Caldwell bill were defeated in the assemby last night. The author was not present and there was no appearance for it. It was killed unanimously. The passage of the agricultural consolidation bill and the agreement to pro rate the appropriations for the state fair made the Caldwell bill impossible.

Assemblyman Dickie made a hard fight for his bill to give state aid for rural teachers who have attained certain educational qualifications. He declared the rural schools were the greatest institution in America, and that less attention is paid to them than to any other field of activity. The bill was placed on Thursday's calendar, when it will be considered in connection with another measure, which proposes a five dollar per month increase to rural teachers without the educational qualification feature.

LOVE LETTERS READ IN COURT

CHICAGO, July 20.—More letters of love, letters of friendship and letters of philosophy were read today before Superior Court Judge McDonald, when the Thomas C. Bermingham will case was resumed.

Mrs. Glendora S. N. Bermingham, the second wife of the late millionaire paper manufacturer, amplified the old letters, when she took the stand as the defendant in Mrs. Helen A. Lee's suit to get half of the estate on the ground that the paper maker prince adopted her.

Mrs. Lee contends Bermingham agreed to adopt her after a meeting at Beloit, Wis. A decision is expected by Thursday.

The difference between a sweetheart's kiss and a husband's kiss is merely the difference between an inclination and an obligation.

BOY SCOUTS TAKE PART IN ACTION

Youthful English Figured Prominently in Frightful Fighting at Ypres

LONDON, June 22.—By Mail to New York.)—British boy scouts have been in action in Northern France. Addressing an assemblage of 1,000 scouts at Stratford, Rev. Edward Digby, London's famous "fighting parson," announced that for the first time in the history of boy scouts these lads had fought and died for their country. Of forty East London scouts and officers who joined the colors two months ago only four are the front of an attack on German lines during the Ypres fighting. They charged with great gallantry in the face of heavy fire.

"When the story of the past fighting near Ypres is recorded London will know how proud she ought to be of her territorials," Rev. Digby told his youthful audience. "Many hundreds of London boy scouts are serving with the territorials. Thank God," he added, "those scouts were in the fore front of an attack on the German trenches when the order came to charge. They never wavered. A scoutmaster was the first to fall. The battalion, 750 strong, swept on and took three lines of trenches at the point of the bayonet. Finally overwhelmed by numbers they were forced to retire."

The minister told how his own scoutmaster, Sergeant Shrosbee, lay wounded in a ditch after the charge until darkness fell and then got lost between the British and German lines. After wandering about for two hours, he found himself between barbed wire entanglements and a trench and called out for a sentry only to be answered by a "star" shell and a volley of rifle fire. He had wandered back to the German lines. He lay down flat and finally crawled to safety. There seemed reason to believe, he added, that the Germans took none of these boys prisoners; most all were killed and the next day, wounded that were lying between the lines were shot at by the Germans every time they moved.

"That," he concluded, "was the story of boy scouts in action. I believe every boy here would go to fill their places if he had the chance, and before this war ends many of you will get the chance to show what you are made of."

War Office News of Fighting

ROME

ROME, July 20.—Austrian troops were defeated with heavy losses in a furious all day battle yesterday on the east bank of the Isonzo, near Sagrado.

Unofficial dispatches this afternoon reported the enemy's losses in killed, wounded and prisoners at nearly 10,000. These figures were not confirmed in official dispatches to the war office.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STAES—Western District of Wisconsin.

The United States of America, Libellant, vs. Seven Dozen Large Sized Bottles and Nine Dozen Small Sized Bottles of Lung Vita, Respondent.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to the command contained in the monition issued herein, I, R. J. Flint, United States Marshal for the said Western District of Wisconsin, did, on the 26th day of June, A. D. 1915, seize two large sized bottles and three small sized bottles of Lung Vita, at the City of La Crosse, in the County of La Crosse, and said Western District of Wisconsin, and have the same now in my custody.

And notice is further given that on the second day of August, 1915, the time fixed for the return of said monition, all persons interested in said property are notified to appear and there interpose a claim, if any they have, to said property, and make their allegations in that behalf.

Dated July 14, 1915.

R. J. FLINT,
United States Marshal, Western District of Wisconsn.

SIX DIE IN FIRE

BOSTON, Mass., July 20.—Trapped on the top floor of a three-story wooden apartment house in Chelsea, six members of the Janowski family—five women and a man—perished early today when the building burned. Two members of the family—children—were rescued and revived by pulmotors. The blaze is believed to have been incendiary.

No One to Send.

Housekeeper (at the telephone)—"Can you send someone around to Doctor Gardner's at once with three pounds of butter and 12 bars of laundry soap?" Answering Voice (over the wire)—"There's nobody here who can go, ma'am—this is the morgue!"

SKULL IS INJURED AND CASHTON MAN STARTS LIFE OVER

Edwin Wang Hurt in Basketball Game Must Relearn from Cradle Days Say Physicians

VIROQUA, Wis., July 20.—(Special.)—Edwin Wang, about 22, of Cashton, well known here, will have to learn over again to talk and walk. He will practically have to start over again as a child, and learn the things which it has taken years to acquire.

Wang was engaged in a game of basketball last spring and was injured about the head. He suffered a stroke of paralysis. Local physicians could do nothing for him. Recently his family took him to Chicago, where nerve specialists examined the skull.

They found that a simple operation would be necessary, but said that the young man would be rendered helpless as a child.
